

PARENTING CHILDREN AND TEENS WITH SPECIAL NEEDS CAN BE CALMER, EASIER AND HAPPIER

Learn how at this exceptional skills seminar on Tuesday, October 30, 2012 with Learning and Behavior Specialist, Noël Janis-Norton

Techniques effective for a wide range of special needs from the autistic spectrum to attention deficit, ODD and other behavioral, developmental and learning issues.

Parenting children and teens with special needs is rewarding, challenging and often overwhelming. You need an additional set of skills to bring out their best and to help you stay calm. Come discover simple, positive and highly effective ways to improve behavior while avoiding the common traps of reminding, repeating and lecturing. You'll leave with specific strategies you can use right away to rapidly improve:

- behaviour, cooperation and impulse control
- confidence, self-reliance and self-esteem
- the ability to handle frustration more constructively
- learning skills, social skills and transitioning between activities

For four decades, parents have been turning to Noël Janis-Norton for skills to help their children and teens with special needs bloom and fulfill their potential at home and at school. As Director of the New Learning Centre in London, she created the Centre's unique "Time Out" school, an intensive short-term alternative to mainstream school, focusing on study skills, social skills and impulse control. Noël is an internationally recognized teacher, trainer, consultant and lecturer, and she is the author of books, CDs and DVDs for parents and teachers, including the recently published, "Calmer, Easier, Happier Parenting: The Revolutionary Programme That Transforms Family Life." "Our son was highly impulsive with diagnosed attention and processing issues, and the outbursts were almost non-stop. With these strategies he is a different child: willing, more focused and both his self-esteem and self-control have soared. We credit Noel with saving our son and our family." --Liz Rivera, Los Angeles
